Abstract: Gary Shteyngart and Ellen Litman are two of the prominent writers of the fourth wave of Russian emigration that occurred after the fall of the USSR in 1991. Shteyngart and Litman are the Soviet-born writers who made the USA to be their second home. At the second home, Shteyngart wrote four novels - The Russian Debutants Handbook (2002), Absurdistan (2006), Super Sad True Love Story (2014) and Lake Success (2018) as well as a memoir entitled Little Failure (2014). Ellen Litman is also a very prominent woman novelist of the fourth wave who has written two novels -The Last Chicken in America (2007) and Mannequin Girl (2014). These two writers are Jewish by religion. There are some similarities as well as some major difference between these two writers. This paper discusses how Shteyngart and Litman depict anti-Semitism and philo-Semitism and what is their stand vis-à-vis anti-Semitism and philo-Semitism. This paper focuses on how these two writers depict Jewish religion, its rites and rituals. This paper also focuses on whether these two writers embrace or discard Jewish religion and religious identity. This paper compares their depiction of anti-Semitism, philo-Semitism, their identification with Jewish religion, their approach towards rites and rituals of Judaism. The paper takes into account particular causes behind such depiction.

Key Words: Anti-Semitism, Philo-Semitism, Jewish Religion, the USSR, the USA.

Gary Shteyngart and Ellen Litman are two of the prominent writers of the fourth wave of the Russian emigration that occurred 1991 onwards after the breakoff of the former Soviet Union. For many of the Jewish writers of the fourth wave, the USA, Germany, France, Canada and Israel became the final destinations. These post-Soviet Jewish writers of the fourth wave fascinated the reading world through their Russian credentials and Jewish themes. In the USA, Gary Shteyngart, Ellen Litman and others are much admired by the American Jewish critics. As quoted by Adrian Wanner, Donald Weber observes that the Russian emigrant writers of the fourth wave have created a new chapter in the tradition of Jewish immigrant writing and their writing has refuted the so called "Howe doctrine" that the Jewish American literature will decline. According to Andrew Furman, Shteyngart and his peers have successfully brought the Jewish voice at the centre of American literary culture.

Gary Shteyngart is the trailblazer of the fourth wave of Russian emigrant writing. Ellen Litman is also a prominent writer of the fourth wave. Both share some common elements. Jewish by birth, they were born in the same period in the Soviet Union but in different cities: Shteyngart was born in Leningrad in 1972 whereas Litman was born in Moscow in 1973. Their parental status and their parents' professional positions were the same: Shteyngart's father was a mechanical engineer whereas his mother was a piano teacher; Litman's father was a chemical engineer whereas her mother was a teacher of mathematics. Both were affected physically in childhood: Shteyngart was an asthmatic child whereas Litman has curvature in spinal cords. Both the writers claim childhood
